When we want a simile for Cleanliness we are up against it, unless we say, "Clean as a Hound's Tooth" (and that doesn't sound as clean as it might), or else "Clean as a Dutch Kitchen," but then who ever saw a Dutch kitchen.

The lowly Cucumber, which used to represent Coolness (though nobody knows why) has resigned to go into the pickle business.

For something that we enjoy eating we have relegated to the past that time-worn phrase, "Tickles the Palate." We have no substitute, unless you will admit into polite conversation that flippant vulgarism "Swell cluding Virginia and the Carolinas, and ordered them to put into effect by May 1, 1914 through rates which will not be in excess of combinations of the present Intermediate passenger rates, in other words, the railroads must by May 1, cease charging higher through rates from Elchmond, Roanoke, Lynchburg and other Virginia cities to Omaha, Denver, San Francisco and other western points than the combined rates from any of those cities to Chicinnati, Pittsburgh or St. Louis and then to the Western cities ha, Denver, San Francisco and other western points than the combined rates from any of those cities to Cincinnati, Pittsburgh or St. Louis and then to the Western cities.

Officials at the Interstate Commerce Commission declared to-day that it is possible at present to buy a passenger ticket from almost any point in the Southern States to Pittsburgh, St. Louis or Chicago, and get off the train there and buy another ticket to a point further west, cheaper than the through passenger fare from the Southern city to the Western point. This, the order issued by commission to-day will prevent in furture.

The radiroads have by the consent of the Interstate Commerce Commission been violating the fourth section clause of the interstate commerce act since 1910 by continuing to charge these higher through passenger fares than combination intermediate rates.

When the fourth section, which makes it unlawful to charge proportionately higher rates for a short haul than for a long haul, was passed in 2019 the railroads were given a specified time in which to adjust their rates in accordance with the new 'aw and file copies with the commission. When the time was up they asked for and received permission to postpone filing the rates until May, 1914. A further postponement was asked and received until May, 1914. A further postponement was asked and received until May, 1914. A further postponement was asked and received until May, 1914. A further postponement was asked and received until May, 1915, and again until May, 1915, and again until May, 1916.

The general passenger agent of the Southern Railway stated to-day that the commission's order will change no passenger rates within the territory south of the Fotomac and Ohio Rivers, and east of the Mississippi River. To points beyond, however, there will be some changes, generally eductions.

He explained that all the railroads in the Southeastern railroads to file their through passenger rates with those which will he in effect after May I, in order to note reductions. He stated
